

Lucas J. Trunnell

DC's best designed destination?

The Library of Congress for its classical architectural elements and The Inn at Little Washington for its flawless integration of textiles and furnishings.

Project you're most proud of?

A Reston penthouse project currently underway. Integrating conceptual renderings into the design process proved essential in mastering the look and feel that our client desired.

Currently you're inspired by...

European-inspired design; it is classic and timeless and can be modified to fit any style, from traditional to contemporary.

Your hidden local source?

Yves Delorme for exceptional linens that only get softer with age and Target for their durable everyday glassware.

Favorite room in your home?

Kitchen; I love to cook, especially my YiaYia's Greek recipes. My Cashmere White granite countertops are perfect for the high demands of a busy kitchen.

Biggest myth about interior design?

That using inexpensive furnishings to increase the scope of a project is a smart choice. Selecting quality items with impeccable construction and high performing fabrics that are luxurious in feel and appropriate to scale increase the durability and longevity of those items.

Great Falls Distinctive Interiors (GFDI), founded by designer Alice Busch 19 years ago, integrates European panache with a contemporary sensibility in high-end residential designs. A part of GFDI's success has been its ability to adapt to the unique personality and dreams of each client. In keeping with this knack for evolution, GFDI welcomes its latest principal designer, Lucas Trunnell. With his extensive experience heading GFDI's preconstruction division and his sophisticated eye for creating impeccable spaces, Lucas is poised to make an impact on the design scene.
